Hongrong, September 18rm, 1894. WHATEVER form of government exists in France, and whoever may hold the reins, her foreign policy suffers little change. That policy, whether under the empire or republic, is one of aggression and perpetual striving to find new realms to add to the dependencies For France, with all her love of conquest and acquisitiveness for others' lands, is an ber traders wanting in the enterprise shown by British and Tentonic merchants. Thus while our Gallie friends-they call us where they have failed-go on adding one territory after another to those which-flaunt the tri-colour, they simply multiply their try will play the following programme at the responsibilities without extending their commerce or increasing their revenue. Under terred by failure, unconvinced by loss the French never weary in pursuit of what has | Valse proved to them a veritable ignis fature. Lust of territory, like another passion, seems to grow with what it feeds upon, and to know no satisty. After Algeria Tunis, and and Diego Surrez the whole of Madagascar. In fact, while any country remains upappropriated the earth hunger of France of conquest. No doubt Frenchmen most fully believe it is the mission of France to pire has still more to do with the unceasing efforts put forth to extend French power and influence abroad. The French will not recognise that the conditions of the countries are different, and that what graw out of the very necessities of the one will not result from the ambition of the other. The insular position of the United Kingdom made her growing population next compelled her some to emigrate from sheer want of space to develop in. Not so with la belle France: ber fertile soil has always sufficed to mainfields wherein others reap the harvest might not be befter employed.

bideration of Rauten's message of the 12th morning. ipst. in which it is stated that M. LE MYRE DE VILERS, supported by four warships, is proceeding to Madagascar to ascertain whether the Hoves will submit to France Should they decline to do so an expedition will be sent to enforce their submission, a result which is expected in France. It is add. Bay, it is rumoured on behalf of the Transvan od that the French Press hail with enthusiasm the prospect of Madagascar becoming a French Australia. The only point in which Madagascar resembles the great island continent is in its size, it being one of the largest islands in the world. It is 975 miles long, with an average width of 250 miles, its greatest breadth heing 350 miles. Its area is nearly four times that of England and Walce, and it contains very little land, that THE RUSSIAN PACIFIC EQUADRON could not be unde productive. There are one on the castern coast. The soil is for the most part rich and fertile, and nearly all the productions of the tropics can be succoesfully raised on it. The mineral resources bave not been much exploited, but iron is found in great abundance in the province of Imerica, sometimes in almost a pure state. Copper and silver have also been discovered. and gold is believed to exist. Autimouy. Bowings should be made in fine wenther nitre, manganese, and rock sult are met with, and traces of other minerals have been found. The country is very healthy for the tropies, especially on the high table lands and might easily maintain twenty times the present population, which is variously estimated at from three to four millions The inhabitants are, moreover, divided into several distinct races, of which the Hoves and Sukalavas are the principal, and first named the dominant and ruling race. While, however, Madagascar could with the uid of Indian labour be made a valuable possession, a second-Java-in point of fact, in is not auitable for European settlement. Unlike Australia, the greater portion of which is fitted for European colonisation, Madu gasear, if conquered, would only afford scope for a few French planters—and they would be few indeed—and the usual small army o ill-paid and ever changing officials. In no sense would Madagascar ever compare with Australia, which is already the home of three millions of stordy Anglo-Saxons and their descendants. The great African island would only prove another Indo-China, where the best part of the trade is conducted by foreigners and where the principal mining enterprise has been worked with British capital. Neither French thews and sinews nor French capital would be attracted to 20 Madagascar any more than they have been drawn to Indo-China. To what good, then, is this misdirected energy in colonial expansion? And how long will the sober sense of the great Freuch nation submit to be carried off its feet by this idea the honour to by on the table, the report of the of empire building? When will France be resigned to the teaching of history, to the recognition of accomplished facts, which plainly assert the failure of French efforts at colonisation and the otter oselessnoss to her of tropical or sub-tropical dependencies which are only a burden to her treasury and a drain upon hor army? The French Government may pour out money like water in public works in these colonies, was increased to £40,000 storling? Maximum desystate=378.624 Minimum deorgase =:61.551 The concluding paragraphs of the report are as follows: -With regard to the salaries of these officers who are appointed from England, we would in

deration of the Government. The decrease in the value of the ourrandy in which they are paid affects them seriously in many ways, such as the cost of life mancance; the cost of education of children in England the enhanced price of all stores, clothing and necessaries of life imported from England; the cost of wife and family in England in case of illhealth canned by tropical disease; the increased cost of a passage home, say, every rix years; and last, but not least, the reduced sterling value of any savings which a public officer may have been able to make out of his pay. These estions in many cases may constitute the only pre islou he has been able to make for his family after his pention ceases, We, therefore, hog to recom wend; that, so spon as the finances or the Colony will permit of it, this question be taken in hand by the Government, and that the scale recently offered by the Scoretary of State to the Strails Settlements be extended to the Hongkong Civil Service. If this privilege is granted, it is compaled that it will involve an Increase in the expanditure of about $125,000 a year, less savings effected on the reduced leave

In conclusion we beg to state that, on a review of the result of those recommendations, we count but feel regret that we are unable to make further reductions, and that the cost of deadly work the guns were doing. While the Chinese and Sinmess bave been lying rapidly of the more dangerous disease so that Wat Saket where the deceased puripers are passed ever to the vultures, has been everflowing with dead bodies, the Baropeans have been auf fering rather largely both from real dysontery and from a variety of it which the doctors hardly understand. This latter is not supposed to be dangerous except in cases of very weak physique but it is very difficult to cure and somewhat alarming in its symptoms. Thus al-Hough we can congratulate ourselves beartily on the non-appearance of the "bubonic plague from China, we are not all in that sound state f besith which reduces the income of the medical men.

At the last moment before completing this placard is brought to me containing a vohement attack upon the British Consulate and its practices. Some of the walls, It bear, have been ornamented with oppies of this effection and other copies have been distributed by this morning's post. It is probably the production of some disappointed suitor who has resorted to this rather oliving device for ventilating his grievannes and those of others in like position; The wording is extravagant and the intention apparently; to a large extent, maliciona, but that which will give it a sort of importance here amongst an ignorant and soundal-loving community is that gross abuses almost admittedly exist in the Court attacked. A very general dissitisfaction prevails as to the administration of the law and still more as to the methods used for summoning British subjects and indirectly putting pressure upon them. The individual re Campbell, Moore &Co. sponsible for the present placard makes a special China Boruco attack upon Mr. Bockett, the acting consul and China Sugar therein exhibits weakness as well as apita for Mr. Beckett, though inexperienced, is by common consent more disposed to not fairly and to do his duty than any of his predecessors.
